

I would like to point out to these people that want to limit XM that I am paying for these features because I cannot get them through regular broadcasting. These are services invaluable to me. If the regular radio has a problem with this, then maybe they should up their standards so they can compete. Instead of worrying about what little money the radio broadcasters are losing because of XM, congress should be worrying about our deficit, how to school our children, and our reputaion in the rest of the world.